NEWS RELEASE

Squamish Terminals set to rebuild East Dock

The East Dock of Squamish Terminals will be rebuilt and completed late summer next year, following the fire last April.

Squamish, B.C., October 30, 2015 - The fire on the evening of April 16, 2015, destroyed the East Dock of Squamish Terminals. Since then, the management team at Squamish Terminals has been working on rebuilding the dock. Measures have been taken to secure operations during the period of only having one dock.

"We are pleased to announce that we are moving forward with the East Dock Rebuild," says Kim Stegeman-Lowe, Vice President Administration, Squamish Terminals.

The marine construction contract has been awarded to Fraser River Pile and Dredge, and all permitting has been secured from various regulatory agencies. While the construction schedule details are still being finalized, we expect mobilization of construction equipment the first week of November, with construction starting shortly thereafter. The East Dock Rebuild is scheduled for completion late summer 2016.

The new dock will be approximately the same size as the one destroyed by the fire, however, it will be a steel and concrete structure. Squamish Terminals will also be adding a gangway platform, which helps further maximize its operating capacity and enhance safety.

"We wish the team at Squamish Terminals much success in executing this important project," says Tom Rasmussen, CEO, Grieg Star Shipping, which owns Squamish Terminals.

"Squamish Terminals is committed to keeping all of its stakeholders, including nearby residents and businesses, informed about the project," says Stegeman-Lowe. For more information and dock rebuild updates visit www.sqterminals.com.

About Squamish Terminals

'Biggest fear' realized when container falls from truck on SoCal highway, killing longshoreman

Our profound condolences go out to Brother Castorena's family, friends and union brothers and sisters on the docks.

An investigation was underway Wednesday into how a big rig's container struck a railroad bridge in Carson, knocking the container from the truck and crushing a cyclist to death Tuesday in Carson.

The bicyclist was identified by the coroner's office as Robert Castorena, 51, of Long Beach. The container fell on its side, landing on top of Castorena on the sidewalk.

Castorena was a longshoreman, who worked with shipping containers on a regular basis.

"That's their biggest fear on the docks, is to be crushed by a trailer," friend Rubin Ramirez said. "I'm almost speechless."

FIGHT FOR $15 Minimum Wage

Now that the election is over, we are looking forward to re-connecting with supporters of the Fight for $15 campaign.

Our next Fight for $15 event will be on Sunday, November 15th at 4:30 pm in front of the Nordstrom store in downtown Vancouver. We will meet at the corner of Robson and Howe to collect petition signatures and hand out leaflets and buttons. If you have any young workers who are keen to help out, please encourage them to attend and then stay downtown for the BCFED Young Workers' Pub Night.

Also mark your calendars for December 15th. We have big plans including a BC Liberal Grinch-themed photo booth and lump of coal favours for passers-by.

LAST WEEK
THIS MORNING
WITH JOHN HORGAN

Last week was an exciting one for anyone who follows politics in BC and Canada. As you might expect, my preference would have been for a different outcome in the federal election, but I'm heartened to see that Canadians voted for change. I was happy to see voter turnout in BC up by ten per cent as citizens took the time to do more than just wish for something different - they voted for it. Congratulations to those who were successful, thank you to all candidates for the time and energy they devoted over the long campaign
